

TREE TOP WALK MOTEL

Cornelius, the Cat

Cornelius was a stunning fellow who had been simply used his whole life as nothing more than a machine to father kittens. Cornelius was housed in very poor conditions, kept in a cage and only handled by his breeder when it was time to do his 'job'. As you can imagine, this is not a life for any animal and it had severely affected Cornelius and his behaviour. Unlike the normal out-going, vivacious, talkative Siamese, Cornelius was quiet and withdrawn, afraid and angry and he was spending much of his days hiding.

We hoped to find someone REALLY special to love this sweet boy and thanks to the kindness of one lady, we did. Cornelius was spotted by Pauline at The Tree Top Walk Motel in Walpole and began a new life in a large enclosure where it was expected that he would live his life 'hanging out' in a way that suited him e.g. not going anywhere near humans ever again.'

How lovely to hear from you that Cornelius might be a mascot. What a wonderful way to get more people hearing about the plight of some 'breeding' animals. Below is the info we used last October for our quiz night. Each table had a profile of an animal on it with details in this case, of Pauline and her motel. We had more info about his life now but Pauline can fill you in better than us on that.

I saw him a few times at the foster home and I can tell you that he looked like if he could have, he would have killed everyone, including himself (see the second pic). Even our very experienced cat fosterer didn't look the other way when she was feeding and cleaning him! But it was just terribly sad because you knew that this had been done to him on purpose by someone who was selling his babies and acting like they loved these cats.

We only got a couple of pics as we knew it wouldn't be what made someone want him.

We would love to hear more about what happens if you have the time.

Sincere thanks,

Nicola, Freedom and all at SAFE AV

I ♥ MY SIAMESE CAT

Around Christmas-time 2017 Pauline brought Cornelius to live at the Motel so that he had company during the day. He acclimatised slowly in his new domain, getting used to the office environment he had to share with Pauline, staff members and Ttyler, Pauline's German Shepherd who goes everywhere with her and also spends every day at the office.

Due to the loving care Pauline has bestowed upon Cornelius he is now very healthy and comfortable in his new home. He has developed confidence enough to "play" with Ttyler and the two have developed to be great companions.
